Free software for photo editing and retouching The software I recommend for photo-manipulating programs is Photoshop Elements 2, which you can find on the web at `www.artsoftusa.com`. You can download the free trial version and test out the program by following these steps: 1. Download Photoshop Elements 2. Turn on your web browser and locate the Windows or Macintosh software on your computer. 2. When prompted, click the link and follow the instructions that appear on your computer screen. If you don't use the free trial version, you'll need to complete the `www.artsoftusa.com` registration process. 3. After you're registered, click the Free icon. 4. With the free version of Photoshop Elements 2, you get three editing tools, which are similar to the tools in Photoshop: the Spot Healing Brush, the Smudge tool, and the Eraser. You can edit the colors, add or subtract objects from an image, change the contrast of the image, resize the image, and create and edit layers. You can also edit videos and apply special effects to your photos. If you're looking for something more than photo editor, you can add special effects with Elements. If you don't want to keep the paid version of Photoshop Elements but want to play around with it, check out the free demo available online at `www.artsoftusa.com`. The free version comes with some features that can apply to photos, videos

Q: Jetty 9.0.0.M5: Does AbstractConnector.doStart work synchronously? I'm running some tests under Jetty 9.0.0.M5 with JettyTestBase. So, I have a method waitAndAssert(String, String). In that method I'm waiting some time and if it has elapsed, I return false. I was hoping that the Jetty server is configured to be synchronous by default, but JettyServer.start() returns true even with synchronous = false. So if Jetty does start the server synchronously, then my waitAndAssert(String, String) is skipped because the server is already running and is not synchronous, so the waiting time was elapsed. Then I tested my server using TestServer.start() and I noticed that jetty.handshakeHandler.httpRequest.setSynchronizer(null) was set by default on the default Configurer. I also had to set that flag to synchornize myself on JettyServer.start(). So my question is, it is safe to set jetty.handshakeHandler.httpRequest.setSynchronizer(null) without any side effect by default. Or was Jetty 9.0.0.M5 already configured to be asynchronous by default? A: Synchronous, by definition, means, that Jetty blocks until the method returns. As you have noticed, JettyServer.start() returns immediately. That means the server is already running and synchronized. The only way in which Jetty can be "synchronous" is if you explicitly start the server, and you can control the manner in which the threads are spawned, so the second constructor of the main class can be used: import org.eclipse.jetty.server.Server; import org.eclipse.jetty.server.ServerConnector; import org.eclipse.jetty.server.handler.ContextHandlerCollection; public class JettyServerTest { public static void main(String[] args) throws Exception { Server server = new Server(); server.setConnectors(new ServerConnector[] { new ServerConnector(server,
