Descargar Wifislax 4.3 Iso TorrentTesla Motors Inc. announced Tuesday that it would lay off 2 percent of its workforce by the end of the year, a move that the company says is aimed at refining "strategy and operations." The automaker said it has hired an unspecified number of new hires to support its future products, such as a next-generation electric sedan. "Many of our efforts are directed at improving our next-generation vehicle, the Model 3, and ensuring that it meets our most stringent levels of quality," said the automaker in a statement. "It is critical to get the launch right, as it directly impacts the long-term trajectory of the company." Tesla has been struggling lately to produce a new version of its Model 3 sedan. CEO Elon Musk has conceded that it could take as long as 2020 to build the next-generation vehicle, which would fill a void in Tesla's lineup following the debut of the $35,000-and-up Model 3 in July. The company said the layoffs represent a "permanent reduction" of the workforce, and it would not elaborate on the number of layoffs it expects to take place. Musk said earlier this month that the company would make a "hard decision" if it was unable to close a new $1.35-billion factory on the banks of Buffalo Bayou in Houston. If the factory cannot be closed in the next five months, Musk said, Tesla would instead build a smaller facility in Fremont that will cost around $1 billion to construct. The layoffs would come on top of three rounds of layoffs in the last 18 months to trim positions and improve efficiency. The last round of cuts was in May, when Tesla laid off 4 percent of its workforce. Tesla earlier this year terminated about 200 workers at its Gigafactory 1 in Reno and other facilities in San Carlos, Calif. The layoffs were part of a broader effort by the automaker to streamline operations as it prepares to launch the Model 3 on a full production line in the next couple of
