When I was a child, my favorite anime was "El Cid". I really enjoyed going to the medieval city and meeting new people there. When I started my career as a game developer, games like "Bastion" and "The Battle for Wesnoth" took me back to those days. Not long ago, my childhood friend was interested in video games, and since he wanted to play games like "Lore", I decided to get him something that he could enjoy. After learning of that game, I was very impressed with the atmosphere that it evoked, so I decided to include that in Elden Ring. Elden Ring is set in the Lands Between, a place where you may reach the ending of the world by moving through the vast number of fragments. What is the atmosphere of a game set in such a magical and mythological place? The Lands Between is a large world full of exciting quests, and there are many places that you can travel to. There are so many different people with different characters all over this world. The Lands Between has a mysterious atmosphere that makes you feel like you are in a fairy tale. It is a place full of wonders that the brave souls who dare to go there will experience in their lifetime. The game has a new and friendly narrative system. How did you decide on that system? Most narrative games only have stories that go like this: A mysterious voice says, "You." You see a location where a certain enemy is located. You defeat it. It was a bit boring, so we tried out new ideas. That's when we decided to use something like a fairy tale. I read a lot of fairy tales as a child. There are all kinds of stories that are elegant and charming, and they make you want to read more. How did you decide on the final settings and characters? I decided on the story first, then searched through the world and wrote down the descriptions. At that point, the bff6bb2d33

Q: Strange record not inserted on docker mysql container I've a strange behaviour here. I've developed a program where I'm using mysql to insert data in table. I'm running this program using docker. My container is built up using fedora and the mysql version in it is 5.5.37. I see that even I log in the container using mysql client like command sudo mysql -u root -p and try to insert a new record like insert into table values ('4', 'test', '4', 'test'); It never inserts the new record, but if I check the table using command show tables; then it shows that the table contains the new record. All the other system are running on the same host are working fine and they have these logins and passwords. What is the reason that I'm unable to insert the data in mysql container. A: It should work, does it work for all users who exist on the server? I had a similar issue and suddenly after one MySQL restart the MySQL server started to refuse to log in (using my local account). All following attempts were refused without exceptions. I was unable to stop/start the server, remove the data directory, reinstall or configure anything. The only solution was to shutdown the server and destroy all volumes. The MySQL service was automatically restarted afterwards. After this I decided to create a second volume, attach it, copy over /var/lib/mysql and start the server again. It worked fine. the Biafra War. Servilius Haterius, Rufus fought a praetorian trial, but was only acquitted when Haterius' trial in absentia failed in a bid to have him executed. However, Rufus was executed by Tiberius Gracchus after the latter's death in 62 BC, as punishment for his support of the prosecution. As
