Reading and analyzing image files How does the image file appear to you visually? Is it beautiful or ugly? As a photo analyst, how do you work with or around the picture in addition to the _information_ that is present within it? The photo analyst/critic (or photo detective) must be able to analyze and review the file through an arsenal of tools to help gauge the value and potential of the image. Here are some tools that you may find in your own personal file library: * The Library module: The Library Module in Photoshop is a handy tool that enables you to organize and store photos and documents in groups. You can create folders and subfolders, mark your files as favorites, and more. * Image in the Background: Another interesting tool in the Library Module is the Image in the Background option. Not only can you make the image itself transparent, but you can also select areas of the image and turn them transparent. This feature can be of great benefit to the photo analyst because it helps you tell what the image is _showing_ versus _what it is showing you._

So how do you start using them? To get started, you will need to create a new image, select the shape tool and draw a rectangle in the layer above the layer you want to select pixels from. You will then need to select the clone stamp tool and, again, draw a rectangle on the layer you want to select pixels from. When the rectangle is selected, click on a pixel of the chosen layer and the selected pixels will be copied and pasted on to your image. It's that simple. You will need to experiment a bit to understand how best to use the features of these tools. Be sure to watch some YouTube tutorials to help you get started. Inhibitory effects of a carbon monoxide extract of New Zealand hibiscus (Hibiscus syriacus Linn.) flowers on the growth of human cancer cells. The aim of the study was to determine whether the aqueous extract (AE) of New Zealand hibiscus (Hibiscus syriacus Linn., Malvaceae) flowers has cytotoxic effects in human cancer cells. The cytotoxicity was tested on 4 human cancer cell lines (KHOS, KHOS-2, MG63 and HOS), using both MTT (3-(4,5-dimethylthiazol-2-yl)-2,5-diphenyltetrazolium bromide) and SRB (sulphorodamine B) methods. The cytotoxic effects were studied at a final concentration of 0.25-8 mg/mL. The AE was fractionated into acidic fraction (HF) and alkaline fraction (AF) in order to assess their role in the observed cytotoxic effects. The extract showed cytotoxic effects against all cell lines studied, with IC50 values at or below the maximum concentration (8 mg/mL) for all cell lines. The effect was better in the MTT test than in the SRB test. The AF showed the strongest cytotoxic effects, and a 2-fold increase in cytotoxicity was observed after fractionation. This study shows that hibiscus has cytotoxic activity against cancer cells. The alkaline fraction was found to be the most active one. Our results encourage further studies, such as animal studies, to confirm these findings.Open this photo in gallery The young woman is seen in a video taken by bystanders as she sits with two men in her
