There are two basic ways to get Photoshop to open: * **Mac or Windows** —Although only the Windows version of Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, offers good basic image editing capabilities, it has a steep learning curve. * **DSLRs** —Most DSLRs have built-in editing capabilities, and many also have an external or add-on camera lens that offers image-editing options to optimize images. Like other software programs, Photoshop relies on having a program known as a _scripter_ (such as Autodesk's AutoCAD or Corel's DRAW) installed for it to work. In a nutshell, the scripter or script is responsible for writing the instructions to Photoshop. If Photoshop doesn't have the appropriate scripter installed, you can try downloading a free program from the Adobe website (www.adobe.com) to install a free version of Photoshop Elements or Photoshop. If the images are too large for the free version, consider buying the full version of Photoshop or Photoshop Elements. ## Opening and Closing the Photostat To start the Photostat, use any of the following methods: * Choose Edit->Stroke to open the Photostat. * Press Ctrl+V (Windows) or +V (Mac OS). Q: Jquery asp.net datetime webcontrol I am trying to get the date and time when I'm inserting into a database. The datetime formatting should be like this to be used in my gridview. > How can I do it? Should I use Jquery? A: You can use this Custom WebControl for doing this: public class DateTime : WebControl, IClientRenderable { public string Format { get; set; } protected void OnInit(EventArgs e) { if (!String.IsNullOrEmpty(Format)) { ViewState["Format"] = Format; Format = ViewState["Format"] as string; } if (!String.IsNullOrEmpty(Format)) { ReplaceFormat(Format); } } private void Format(string format, object arg) { if (format == "MM/dd/yyyy hh:mm:ss tt") return string.Format(format, arg); else if (format == "MM/dd/yyyy HH:mm:ss") return string.Format(format, arg); else if (format == "dd/MM/yyyy hh:mm:ss tt") return string.Format(format, arg); }}

Q: How to reliably compare the POSIX date value of a file to the date in the time value of a file? I have a database of files in a Linux server, and want to do a simple file lookup on every file to see whether it was created "before" or "after" a certain date. The files are all in a library, so it's easy enough to read the last modification timestamp of a file and compare it to the current date: if [ -d "$searchPath/$file" ]; then date -d "-1 day" else date fi This works in my use case. However, I'd like to know whether this is reliable. A: Testing result Here are the results of a test on macOS Catalina (macOS Mojave and macOS High Sierra are close enough) and using the stat system call: $ tar -tzvf turfile.tgz ; adding file lib/test.txt (test.txt) ; adding file lib/test2.txt (test2.txt) $ date -r lib/test2.txt Thu Feb 3 18:43:27 EST 2019 $ stat -c "%Y" lib/test2.txt Thu Feb 3 17:45:19 EST 2019 $ stat -c "%Y" lib/test.txt 2019 $ stat -c "%Y" lib/test2.txt 2019 It appears that the stat system call and the date command are simply not reliable when working with timestamps that are less than one day in the past. macOS' stat vs date For most of these functions, including access time, modification time, and file creation time, the difference between the two is only in the order of nanoseconds. Note: The file information is cached by macOS. The stat call tells you the size of the file in bytes, the date command tells you what time the file was last modified, and the stat call -c "%Y" tells you what year the file was created. The stat call is unreliable unless the file size is greater than one day in the past. So in this case, when you run the stat call, the file is 14 days old. Unix:
