Licensed to an On Line Internet Service Provider in the State of North Carolina, Beachhead, Inc. is a consumer driven company, founded in 1997 by a former Marine and Viet Nam Veteran, who's already run two successful Companies, Beachhead Software and Beachhead Minerals, both over ten years old and as we speak are very profitable. Beachhead, Inc., started as a single idea, that we as gamers would want more PC Realistic action, more than what was currently available, and if we can do it right, we could make a billion dollar company out of it. I personally can remember back in 1997 in 1996 when I first heard of war games online with flying tanks, or with tanks and helicopters flying around and there was never anything like that on our home computers or in the arcade. We want to make sure the PC Realistic genre of Action Gaming is here to stay, and keep those war stories going for a long time. When I started Beachhead 2002, it had been a goal of mine to bring the soldier back into the action of war, by making them battle it out in the open, in the shadows of the night, and in the chaos of the battlefield. Beachhead 2002, brings that level of realism back to the PC, and we sure do owe it to the men and women in the real US military to have a game that gives a better sense of the real war out there. Even then it wasn't set to be the game we made it to be, but it became a passion project to us and as we started to learn more about war and did more research, we found out the larger more important issue of the War on Terror and how the US Military and Military men and women play a huge part in it. We've had some emails from US Military Men and Women who told us that this game has become an inspiration to them because it has made them feel like they were back at the battlefield right there with the rest of the fighting men and women. From personal experience, we've been to enough battles where we didn't know what we were fighting and we didn't know who the enemy was, but we knew it was something bad and we were fighting for our lives. Since we were just kids we have seen US Soldiers come back from the front, and we want to keep them safe by not letting them fight in a situation that is not prepared for, or not the right time and place. They fought and fought with enough guts and determination to keep that war alive, in the c9d1549cdd

What's new in GrappleWell:

's Retrocast The Earth and the Sun will not look the same any longer. Thomas Roberts 5 June 2018 HISTORY: Twelve years ago an apocalypse movie arrived in theatres. That movie, COPS, featured a tear-gas-waving, ant-throwing, semi-truck-humping Earth that was very close to the apocalyptic apocalypse we are going to experience later this week. The movie, and the 10 million sales it earned, were pretty much the last we saw of the semi-truck apocalypse movie theme. So it's with a bit of amusement that I note that the premise of Planet 1138, also does not seem to be a particularly good one, other than as a (rather well-obscure) conceit in a science fiction film that was conceived and wrote by D. J. Caruso. NOW: The basic idea is that as Earth's sun becomes older and dimmer, and the Earth's orbit becomes too hot for liquid water, life dies away and the planet either turns into a nuclear wasteland, or revives into a Helium-4 world. I don't mean "dies away" as being dark and barren, but rather that something unknown happens, and after that the climate settles down to a new "order". The idea that it's the Sun's death throes (due to gravitational forces and nuclear radiation) that kills off life here is especially suspect. With the Sun's take-off phase over (or done, almost, depending on your view), there's been hardly any change in the Sun's output in nine and a half billion years, which is silly. Earth was already at a nice steady distance from the Sun by the time it became an active star (I'd have thought 8, 100,000,000,000 years ago, as per the big Ice Age credit). The sun-Earth distance has essentially stayed the same ever since. The impact the Sun is going to have on Earth is no more than it was, say, 0.5 billion years ago. For there to be observable changes, it's also going to have to be a very substantial temperature change, in order to change the weather. (I'm OK with something like -20C on Earth, but not like 0C, the low of the post-ice age event.) But precisely when the planet's oceans would have frozen solid is not supposed to be important here. The planet has been

=====DLC INFORMATION===== - Journey of Discovery DLC - will feature new events and a collection of unique high quality pieces of art. More information to come! This is a game that does things "right" (in the sense that it's a well-crafted game, not just a good concept). It tells its story well and you have a solid reason to keep making decisions. The mechanic of traveling across the world itself feels rewarding, since you can do things to upgrade your vehicle or buy new items, and you can develop your people to increase your ability to handle more and more things. I just finished the tutorial and now I'm wandering the streets of this big world and enjoying the experience. It's a very well-written game, and it will definitely keep you entertained over the length of time you're invested in it. silkroad is fun and different for the most part, however, the game gets repetitive after a while and it is buggy. I plan on using the money I spent to buy the DLC Journey of Discovery
